INDIA@75: GANDHIJI'S UNDYING RELEVANCE

Professor N Radhakrishnan

How does one explain the phenomenon of having the power to attract an estimated number of over 30,000 people every day to the Gandhi Memorial at Rajghat in Delhi where the Father of the Nation was consigned to flames? Among those who come there are men and women, children, youth, physically challenged, people of all religions, diplomats, Heads of foreign nations and people from all walks of life. They don't come like tourists but come like pilgrims of peace and harmony. The eyes of many wet with tears as they go round the marble slabs to pay their respects to the prophet of peace. Once when this writer ventured to ask what their impressions were on visiting the final resting place of the Mahatma, two young men who came from the rural depths of Bihar said, "He died for us. This is a place of inspiration and introspection for us."

There is no reason to disbelieve these young men. Gandhi stood like a sentinel between the warring communities and groups. By shedding his blood at the altar of communal harmony, Gandhi effected a truce which acted like a cementing force. Gandhi taught that violence begets greater violence. The miracle Gandhi achieved in Noakhali, and other places where men had become beasts is part of history and his lead continues to inspire a considerable segment of Indian masses as well as human rights activists, freedom fighters and those who seek alternative life styles and ecological protection. The deep impression Gandhi was able to make on the global psyche is also unparalleled.

Elimination of factors which promote structural violence requires to be given utmost importance. Removal of the vestiges of social evils like untouchability once and for all, gender inequality, ensuring of social justice and employment opportunities to millions of youth are among the unfinished tasks in the Gandhian agenda as we reflect on the contemporary challenges in the context of the 75th anniversary of Indian Independence.

The India of Gandhi's dreams

As we reflect on the 75th anniversary of our independence we have every reason to feel proud of our achievements since the British left India.

"I shall work for an India in which the poorest shall feel it is their country, in whose making they have an effective voice; an India in which there will be no high class and low class of people; an India in which all communities shall live in harmony. Women shall enjoy the same rights as men... All interests not in conflict with the interest of the mute millions will be scrupulously respected, whether foreign or indigenous. I hate distinction between foreign and indigenous," the Mahatma wrote on his vision of an India.

The 18-point Constructive Program — the biggest gift of the Mahatma, which

NATIONAL GANDHI MUSEUM

PRESERVING, PROCESSING, PROMOTING GANDHIJI'S LEGACY

On the occasion of Gandhi Jayanti, Employment News, takes a look at how the National Gandhi Museum, New Delhi, preserves, processes, promotes and shares the resources on Mahatma Gandhi. Shri A. Annamalai, Director of the Museum, in an interview with Shri S. Rangabashiam elucidates the vision and mission of the museum.

The life and times of the Father of the Nation have been fondly treasured by Indians. What role does the National Gandhi Museum play in preserving Mahatma Gandhi's legacy to be cherished by generations to come?

The National Gandhi Museum is a Gandhi Heritage which preserves the legacy of the great life. It is a fitting tribute to a man who meticulously recorded his own history. He never followed history instead he created History. Therefore, it is necessary to have a Biographical Museum for the Maker of History.

The National Gandhi Museum is artistically and aesthetically curated to take the visitor through a historical journey through Gandhi's relics, photographs, artistic expression, etc. The display starts with the entrance gallery, the spinning wheel gallery, photography gallery, the commemorative gallery, the martyrdom gallery and the art gallery.

The Museum houses a vast library, an audio-visual section and a photography section where

SARDAR PATEL THE CHAMPION OF A UNITED INDIA

S.B. Singh

As India celebrates 'National Unity Day' on October 31, it is an opportune time to revisit the enduring contribution of Sardar Patel in the multi-dimensional task of nation-building post-partition and post-independence. The India we know today as a single geographical entity is the gift of Patel. When we say "from Kashmir to Kanyakumari, India is one," we essentially pay tribute to Patel leading the arduous task of unifying India. If Gandhi lent his leadership to free India from foreign rule, Patel led its unification. Without a united India, we as a nation would have lost the whole meaning of independence.

When the British left India, our leaders faced the task of cobbling up unity in a fragmented geography. The task to integrate 565 big and small princely states was an difficult one, requiring sagacity, firmness and political skills of a high order. Patel was the man of the moment, and he indeed rose to the occasion. He was a natural choice to be made the first Home Minister of India, which allowed him to bolster India's internal security and build a strong and united India. Patel was also

Chairman of two important committees of the Constituent Assembly, viz: the Advisory Committee and the Provincial Constitution Committee. His credentials in leading peasants and crafting the being decisive and dealing with any challenging situation with an "iron hand." It is hard to imagine how the intractable princely states would have been unified as a single nation without a colossal leader like Patel. India was indeed fortunate to have a man cut out for the job, and he performed the job with surgical precision.

Different tasks: Different leaders

The making of a nation is not an individual project. It requires more than one to accomplish the complex task of building a nation on solid foundations. The first task i.e. securing independence from British rule, was left to Gandhi. He led a powerful non-violent national movement against the British, finally compelling them to grant independence and leave India to Indians. But then cropped up the issue of uniting the princely states, and Patel handled this with an iron hand. The third task was to build democratic institutions, modern industries, and align India well with the rest of the world through a rational foreign policy, a job for which Nehru was the chosen man.

IITs (Indian Institutes of Technology) and IIMs (Indian Institutes of Management) are considered highly prestigious institutes in our country. Top companies offer many students from these institutes lucrative positions during the campus placement process. However, not every student is willing to take up such dream assignments as many choose the path of entrepreneurship.

A regular job has its advantages. Your roles are defined, you get your salary month after month, and you work with a team comprising colleagues and others, which provides a social setting. Moreover, working with a prestigious organization adds to your social stature, you get promotions and rise in the hierarchy. Despite these perks, many people think differently, preferring to become entrepreneurs even though the path is laden with uncertainty and challenges.

In a job, even if you're a great worker, your value is filtered through the perception of your superiors, your colleagues, and office culture, which may be good or bad. Even for the best performers, there is a limit to what they earn though money is not the only criterion. People who prefer freedom and independence over job security and stable income have no qualms leaving their comfort zone and embracing entrepreneurship. For hard-working and committed people, there may be limitless opportunities in becoming an entrepreneur. Entrepreneurship is both challenging and fulfilling.

If we look around, we see that most people choosing entrepreneurship have not gone through formal education in the subject (of entrepreneurship). They do not consider it necessary to spend time on such a course and prefer to start straightaway.

Everyone thinking of becoming an entrepreneur has the choice of first studying the subject and then embarking on an endeavour or skipping the academic route and starting straightaway. However, those who are looking to join a course have ample options.

A general MBA or Postgraduate Diploma in Management can provide you with enough inputs to start your venture. The objective of such a course is to equip people to own and run an enterprise. Courses with a specific focus on Entrepreneurship are also available in different forms.

A comprehensive course will cover the following:-

Basics of entrepreneurship, entre-preneurial career and
